ARMOUR'S AMAZING GOLF IN U.S. OPEN

Breaks Course Record
With 68.

SARAZEN NOW THIRD

Glenview, Ill., To-day.
Playing superb golf yesterday Tommy Armour, the former British player, returned a record breaking card of 68 to lead the field in the first 18 holes of the American.

Open Golf Championship.
A stiff wind troubled the players who competed in a broiling sun at 90 degrees.

Gene Sarazen, the holder, returned a 74 to tie for third place, while Walter Hagen was second with a 73.

Tommy Armour's amazing card was as follows:

First Nine—

Par 4 4 3 3 4 5 3 4—34

Second Nine—

Par 4 4 3 4 5 3 3 4—34

Walter Hagen, McCarthy, Neil White, Revolta Cluci and Craig Wood tied for second place with 73.

Gene Sarazen, Mayo, Creavy, Laffoon, Joe Kirkwood and Willcox tied for third place with 74.

Over a dozen players returned cards of 75, among whom were Johnny Farrell, Goodman, Crickshank, Olin Dutra, Horton Smith and Runyan.

T. P. Perkins, the British entrant, Don Moreland, Abe Espinosa and Shute returned cards of 76.

Macdonald Smith returned a 77 and Leo Diegel and Cooper shot 78's. Billy Burke had a 79 and George Von Elm an 80.—Reuter.

GLOUCESTER TRIUMPH OVER GLAMORGAN

Goddard 12 For 90 And Parker 5 For 58.

BARNETT'S SECOND CENTURY

Lodon, To-day.

Brilliant bowling by Frank Goddard (12 for 90) and hurricane hitting by Barnett enabled Gloucestershire to record their third win in nine games when they beat Glamorgan by an innings at Pontypridd.

Goddard, who at one time was a fast bowler, was responsible for the dismissal of the Welsh county for totals of 129 and 114. His medium deliveries gave him figures of 7 for 48 and 5 for 42. Goddard's best feat prior to this was his 6 for 71 against Kent.

Charlie Parker, the veteran slow bowler, recorded his first bowling triumph of the season by capturing 5 for 58 after bowling unchanging with Goddard.

Barnett, who scored a magnificent 146 against Kent, registered his second century of the season in a big partnership with C. C. Dacre, the former New Zealand Test player.

Glamorgan, who have yet to record a win, have lost four of their seven matches.

Result as called by Reuter:

Gloucester beat Glamorgan by an innings and 89 runs at Pontypridd. Glamorgan 129 (Goddard 7 for 48) 114 (Goddard 5 for 42, Parker 5 for 58).

Gloucester 332 (Barnett 154, C. C. Dacre 54).

WAR DEBT DISCUSSION IN WASHINGTON

President Roosevelt Sees
British Ambassador

Washington, To-day.
President Roosevelt and the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay met yesterday afternoon to discuss the war debts question. President Roosevelt yesterday issued a new statement expressing his readiness to receive any official request for war debt revision, stating that the nations concerned must make the first step.—Reuter.

GREECE BEATEN IN DAVIS CUP

Czecho Slovakia Enter
Semi-Final.

PERRY AND AUSTIN WIN IN STRAIGHT SETS

London, To-day.

Great Britain, leading Italy by two matches to all, will probably meet Czecho-Slovakia in the Semi-Final Round of the European Zone of the Davis Cup.

Yesterday Greece was eliminated by a 3-0 margin and Perry and Austin recorded straight sets wins over their Italian rivals.

Prague, To-day.

Czecho Slovakia entered the Semi-Final Round of the European Zone of the Davis Cup yesterday when her doubles pair triumphed over their Greek rivals in no uncertain manner.

Having secured a 2-0 lead on Wednesday Czecho Slovakia secured the doubles match against Greece yesterday to qualify to meet either Great Britain or Italy in the Semi-Final.

Scores as called by Reuter.

Menzel and Marsalek (Czecho Slovakia) beat Xydis and Nicolaides 6-1, 6-1, 6-1.

Earlier Results
Siba (Czecho-Slovakia) beat Nicolaides 6-3, 3-6, 6-2, 6-1.

Menzel (Czecho-Slovakia) beat Stalios 6-2, 6-4, 9-7.—Reuter.

Straight Sets Wins.

Eastbourne, Yesterday.

Great Britain has secured a commanding position over Italy in the quarter finals of the European Zone of the Davis Cup. Fred Perry and "Bunny" Austin both won their singles matches yesterday in straight sets.

Results as called by Reuter.

Fred Perry (Britain) beat Morpurgo 6-4, 7-5, 6-4.

Bunny Austin (Britain) beat Stefani 6-2, 7-5, 7-5.

SCHMELING LOSES TO BAER

Heavyweight Bout In
New York.

STOPPED IN TENTH ROUND

New York, To-day.

Max Schmeling, the German heavyweight boxing champion who was robbed of the world title by a doubtful points decision against Jack Sharkey, received another setback yesterday when he was forced to retire in the tenth round of his 15-round bout with Max Baer.

The battle, which was to have acted as an eliminating bout for the world title, was under the promotion of Jack Dempsey, former world champion.

Baer will probably meet the winner of the Sharkey-Carnera bout, which takes place in New York on June 29.—Reuter.

FOUR POWER PACT EXPLAINED

NO PREPONDERANCE
IN EUROPE

BRITAIN NOT BOUND TO EXTEND HER OBLIGATIONS

LONDON, TO-DAY.

BRITAIN'S ADHERENCE TO THE FOUR POWER PACT DOES NOT IMPLY THE EXTENSION OF BRITAIN'S OBLIGATIONS IN EUROPEAN AFFAIRS. THIS WAS MADE CLEAR IN A DESPATCH FROM THE FOREIGN SECRETARY, SIR JOHN SIMON, TO SIR RONALD GRAHAM, BRITISH AMBASSADOR TO ROME, AUTHORIZING THE INITIALING OF THE PACT.

The despatch, which was published last night, underlines the point made by Signor Mussolini on Wednesday, that the Pact is not an attempt by the four Powers to impose their will on other States or to establish a European directory.

IT WAS NEVER THE INTENTION TO ATTEMPT TO ESTABLISH A SPECIES OF HEGEMONY IN EUROPEAN AFFAIRS, THE DESPATCH STATES.

The despatch from the Foreign Secretary, to the British Ambassador in Rome commenting on the aim and purpose of the Four Power "Agreement of understanding and co-operation," is included in a White Paper containing the text.

The despatch states, "Through-out the negotiations, we have made it clear that the proposed agreement should in no sense be regarded as a substitute for, or as set in opposition to, the Covenant of the League.

"It is not a piece of rival or competing machinery, but is framed for the purpose of operating within the ambit of the Covenant and in fulfilment of its object, and to uphold the principles for which the League stands.

Methods and procedures which may fall to be studied or adopted under the agreement, are strictly in accordance with the spirit of the Covenant."

Sir John Simon also emphasises that the proposed agreement was never intended to involve any attempt on the part of the Four Powers, if not to impose their will on other States at least to establish themselves as a kind of directory in Europe. Such a conception would be entirely foreign to the principles of the Covenant which recognises the equal rights of all States, just as in appropriate cases, it requires their unanimity.

"I have been at pains to explain the attitude of His Majesty's Government in this matter, to representatives of other Powers and particularly to those of Belgium and Poland and the Little Entente," Sir John Simon stated.

"By the form which the proposed agreement has finally assumed, I am confident that any such erroneous impression will be completely eradicated.

"In this connexion I may refer in particular to the last Paragraph (Continued on Page 12.)

Official circles are of the opinion that the Four Power Pact has improved France Italian relations.

The Three-Power Conference between Great Britain, France and the United States, was called as a result of the deadlock on the major issues of the Disarmament Conference, on Wednesday.

Throughout yesterday, conversations took place in Paris between the British, French and American representatives.

The French Premier, Foreign Minister, Foreign Minister and Naval Minister, Messrs. Daladier, Paul Boncour and Leygues, the (Continued on page 12.)

U.S. May Agree
With France.

NO DEFINITE DECISION
REACHED IN PARIS

Paris, later.

The Three Power conversations here have not resulted in any definite decision even on principle according to a semi-official statement issued yesterday evening.

The statement declares that France has given up the idea of obtaining any fresh guarantees of mutual assistance from other Powers, but adheres to her ideas regarding control of armaments.

She also asks for the publication of military budgets.

It is believed here that the idea of control is making headway with the Americans, but that Britain is still opposed to the idea.—Reuter.

Berlin was en fete for Chancellor Adolf Hitler's birthday, the festivities beginning with a mass parade in front of the Prussian Home Office, followed by a Cathedral service. Dr. Goebbels, Minister of the Interior, leaving the Cathedral, with Prince August Wilhelm on his left (S. & G.).

WALL STREET SPECULATORS UNCERTAIN

Reaction Fears Cause Profit-Taking.

SILVER HEAVILY SOLD

New York, To-day.

There was an initial sharp advance in silver on the New York market yesterday, which attracted heavy realising and bank selling for the rest of the session. The bulk of the demand came from speculators.

Industrial and bond averages showed a slight upward tendency, but rail averages declined .49 to 43.04. Utility averages remained unchanged at 34.22. Business again continued on a large scale, 6,530,000 shares being dealt in.

In their daily report, Messrs. E. A. Pierce and Company, through their local correspondents, Messrs. Asia Land, Ltd., state:

"We think that more people look for a reaction now than at any time since the market soared up. In other words, we believe that there has been heavy profit-taking.

"We have been expecting a reaction for the past week and we have reached the stage where we think it is anybody's mere guess.

"There is plenty of bullish talk regarding utilities, particularly the issues of the eastern operating companies.

"Wheat sold higher early in the session on bullish crop news but, in the afternoon, eased in sympathy with the weakness of securities.

"Speculative ardour in cotton has been dampened by the absence of definite news on the acreage question. The trade absorbed the liquidation at the decline. The foreign markets have been weak."—Reuter.

SAILOR DIES FROM SUNSTROKE

Leading-Cook F. N. Bunt
Of H.M.S. Caradoc.

The death occurred yesterday morning at the Royal Naval Hospital of Leading-Cook F. N. Bunt, of H.M.S. Caradoc, from sunstroke.

Deceased was buried at 8 a.m. this morning at Happy Valley with full Naval honours. Flags on H.M. Majesty's ships in the harbour were flown at half mast between 8 a.m. and 9 a.m.

Bunt leaves a wife at St. Ives in Cornwall.

CONFIDENCE IN AMERICA

U.S. Treasury Issue
Over-Subscribed.

Washington, To-day.

The United States Treasury issue of notes and certificates totalling $890,000,000 has been five times over-subscribed, according to an announcement made by Mr. William H. Woodin, United States Treasury Secretary.

The subscriptions totalled over $55,000,000,000.

The issue, announced on June 6, consists of some $500,000,000 five-year 2% per cent. Treasury notes and about 400,000,000 nine-month 3% per cent. certificates of indebtedness, to be used to meet maturing debts, to pay interest on the public debt and to provide funds for the industrial recovery programme.—Reuter.

The Gold Discount Bank rediscunt credit of $46,000,000 will be paid back now, instead of in July, when it is actually due, in paper dollars, meaning a profit of 30,000,000 Marks to Germany at the present rate of the dollar.—Reuter.

EUGENE CHEN FOR JAPAN?

Soviet Receives News Of Secret Mission.

Riga, To-day.

The Soviet Government is reported to have received news that Mr. Eugene Chen has gone, secretly, to Japan from Shanghai, on an important mission.

It is believed that Mr. Chen left yesterday aboard a Japanese steamer.—Reuter.

148 REFUGEES FROM MEXICO.

Chinese Deportees Return.

Shanghai, To-day.

The sixth batch of Chinese nationals to expelled from Mexico, comprising 148 men, women and children, arrived here this morning on board the President Coolidge, on which they are sailing to Hong Kong early to-morrow morning.—Reuter.

JUNK SHIPWRECK SURVIVORS

Five Chinese, natives of Wenchow, were shipwrecked when their junk became waterlogged off the Chu San Archipelago. They were rescued by a Japanese motor launch, the Tashuri Maru, and brought to Hong Kong. The junk was shipwrecked on June 5.

PAYMENTS IN MARKS

NO FOREIGN CURRENCY PAYMENTS

Standstill Creditors To Meet On June 13.

GERMANY TO BENEFIT BY EXCHANGE

Berlin, To-day.

A general moratorium has been declared on all credits granted to Germany before July, 1931, because Dr. Schacht, President of the Reichsbank, declares, "Germany's present financial position was caused by the bank crisis of that date."

Transfers will be made as far as possible, on credits granted to Germany after July, 1931.

The Dawes Young Plan loans will be suspended under the terms of the German transfer moratorium. The existing Standstill Agreements are at present unaffected, but Dr. Schacht, at the Standstill negotiations in London next week, hopes to obtain some alleviation for Germany.

The transfer moratorium does not mean the cessation of payments in marks, of principal and interest, but merely the cessation of payments in foreign currency.

German private debtors must pay into a special conversion fund at the Reichsbank, which promises to convert marks into foreign currencies whenever the German supply of foreign currencies warrant.

The Gold Discount Bank rediscunt credit of $46,000,000 will be paid back now, instead of in July, when it is actually due, in paper dollars, meaning a profit of 30,000,000 Marks to Germany at the present rate of the dollar.—Reuter.

Moratorium Not Yet In Force.

Berlin, to-day.

The transfer moratorium comes into force on July 1. Later.

The transfer moratorium has not yet come into force, and needs implementing by a decree which is expected to be issued to-day.—Reuter.

Creditors To Meet In London.

Dr. Schacht announces that the Reichsbank has requested Germany's long-term creditors as well as the Bank of International Settlements, to attend the meeting of Standstill creditors in London on June 13.—Reuter.

Germany Hopeful Of Concessions.

OPPORTUNITY PROVIDED FOR NEGOTIATION.

Berlin, To-day.

The reason that the transfer moratorium will not operate until July 1, according to political circles here, is to give an opportunity for reconsideration of the transfer problem in London next week, when Germany's creditors meet, and the World Economic Conference opens.

It is hoped that both the creditors and the Conference will give Germany sufficient concessions to eliminate the necessity of the drastic measures laid down in the moratorium.—Reuter.

The WOMAN'S Page

Are You Being Poisoned?

By the accumulation of waste matter in your intestines? In constipation of people the blood re-absorbs particles of waste matter and these result in a poison-laden blood-stream. Such a condition gives rise to that 'off colour' feeling, loss of energy and desire to work, headaches, dizziness and a general lowering of vitality which makes you liable to colds and perhaps more serious infections. The constipated person cannot possibly be happy and healthy. Therefore avoid constipation by taking an occasional dose of Pinkettes. This all-vegetable aperient acts as gently as nature but with a pleasing thoroughness. For sufferers from bilious attacks, liver ailments, bad breath, pimples and boils—all results of constipation—you cannot use anything more pleasantly effective than Pinkettes, Liver and Laxative Perfection. All chemists can supply you.

UP-TO-DATE IDEAS IN THE HOME.

Innovations That Aid Housekeeping.

Every house-keeper knows the fag of drawing over the mattress the cover that is made to tie at the farrow end. Generally you tear the thing at the top in the effort to manipulate the folds and creases!

The new box-sided cover of strong jean is sensibly made to open at the wide side, so that there is little difficulty about pushing in the mattress. The seams are strengthened with binding.

Linen Tablecloths.

A good many people are going back to linen table-cloths, but here comes the question of pads to prevent the heat of plates from reaching the table.

If separate pads are used, they usually slip out of position and defeat their own object. But there is now a folding table-pad, made to fit the table top or any part of it, which can be used with or without a cloth.

The heat-proof board is covered with washable leather cloth that is pleasant to the eye; and an ingenious device enables it to be folded quite small when not in use.

Trolley Service.

You can have the service trolley fitted with a similar pad so that the surface may not be marked by the hot tea-pot and water-jug.

Talking of trolleys, there is a new type that not only has side flaps to turn it into a tea-table, but also flanges which, when the flaps are down, prevent the china and glass from slipping off.

The flanges disappear when the trolley is converted into a tea-table, fitting into grooves and leaving the table quite smooth.

New Condiment Set.

A new condiment set gets over the difficulty of damp salt and pepper remarkably well. You no longer pour the seasonings out of holes in the top of the cellars, but press a lever and release the salt or pepper from the bottom.

When you have taken what you require, the lever springs back and keeps all airtight. The set is very decorative the glass containers being arranged on a base or coloured ebonite.

Upright Toaster.

Better than the old-fashioned toasting fork is the toaster on an upright stand fitted with four holders for the slices. You place it in front of the fire and get perfect toast without any trouble.

When one side is ready, you just turn the stand round and cook the other.

SATIN FROCK ORGANDY WRAP.

Boleros of Black Tulle Are Worn.

A gleaming satin frock stamped with a pink and white floral pattern is worn with a little wrap of shell pink organdy with frilled circular sleeves.

A black satin gown designed along slender lines is topped by a frivolous bolero of black tulle studded with red spangles, and a soft blue crepe frock has a matching elbow-length cape banded in fabric feathers made of the same material.

SEPARATE CAPE IS POPULAR.

Three-Quarter Length For Sports Suits.

The separate cape in three-quarter length to be worn with sports frocks and suits is a fashion to be reckoned with. It was one of the most popular fashions at the fashionable resorts this past winter and was an outstanding note in cruise clothes.

It is smartest developed in nubby tweed and worn with matching suits or with knitted suits and dresses.

Later on we will see it in flannel and other summer sports fabrics in white and pastel tones. Smart wardrobes that went cruising last winter used it exclusively as a substitute for the top-coat.

New British-Made Material

A new British-made material is said to be as soft as the skin. It is an oatmeal coloured cashmere, softer than angora and with no loose hairs to irritate the skin.

Other new materials are a crushed strawberry pink woollen with a basket-pattern weave; a raspberry red crepe with the popular blistered surface, and a thick red cloth for country wear of loosely woven silk and wool.

BOWS SUPPLEMENT SCARVES

Large bows tied round the neck and pulled out under the chin are taking the place of scarves. A plaid taffeta bow looks smart with a plain navy coat with no collar.

MODERN MAKE-UP HINTS.

Cheap Cosmetics Are Harmful

"STUDY YOUR TYPE"

(By Phyllis Nelson-Terry).

The use of powder nowadays is universal and the prettiest woman is often the one who studies her defects and makes her toilet with the object of overcoming them as much as possible.

I always strongly recommend the use of only good powders. As with all cosmetics, cheap, highly-scented preparations not only give unsatisfactory results, but they are definitely harmful to the skin.

Make-up must suit the colouring of the wearer and as the best powders are usually made in five or six shades there should be no difficulty in finding the right one. You must study your type and when you find the powder that soothes your skin and makes it look its best, keep to it. As a general rule the blonde with a very fair skin needs a natural tint, while the owner of darker colouring will find a warmer tone more suitable. For the older women I recommend a creamy pink shade.

Powder must never be applied unless the skin is perfectly clean. Foundation cream is the best for powder. After cleansing the face and neck, pat the cream in, then powder lightly. To apply it evenly, always use a puff made of lamb's wool or velvet. Powder under the eyes is unbecoming, and all traces of it should be removed from the eyebrows, and the brows brushed into shape.

Clean Powder Puffs.

Finally I must impress on you the importance of keeping your powder puff scrupulously clean. Nothing will clog the pores quicker and cause blackheads more than a soiled puff, and it should either be washed or thrown away.

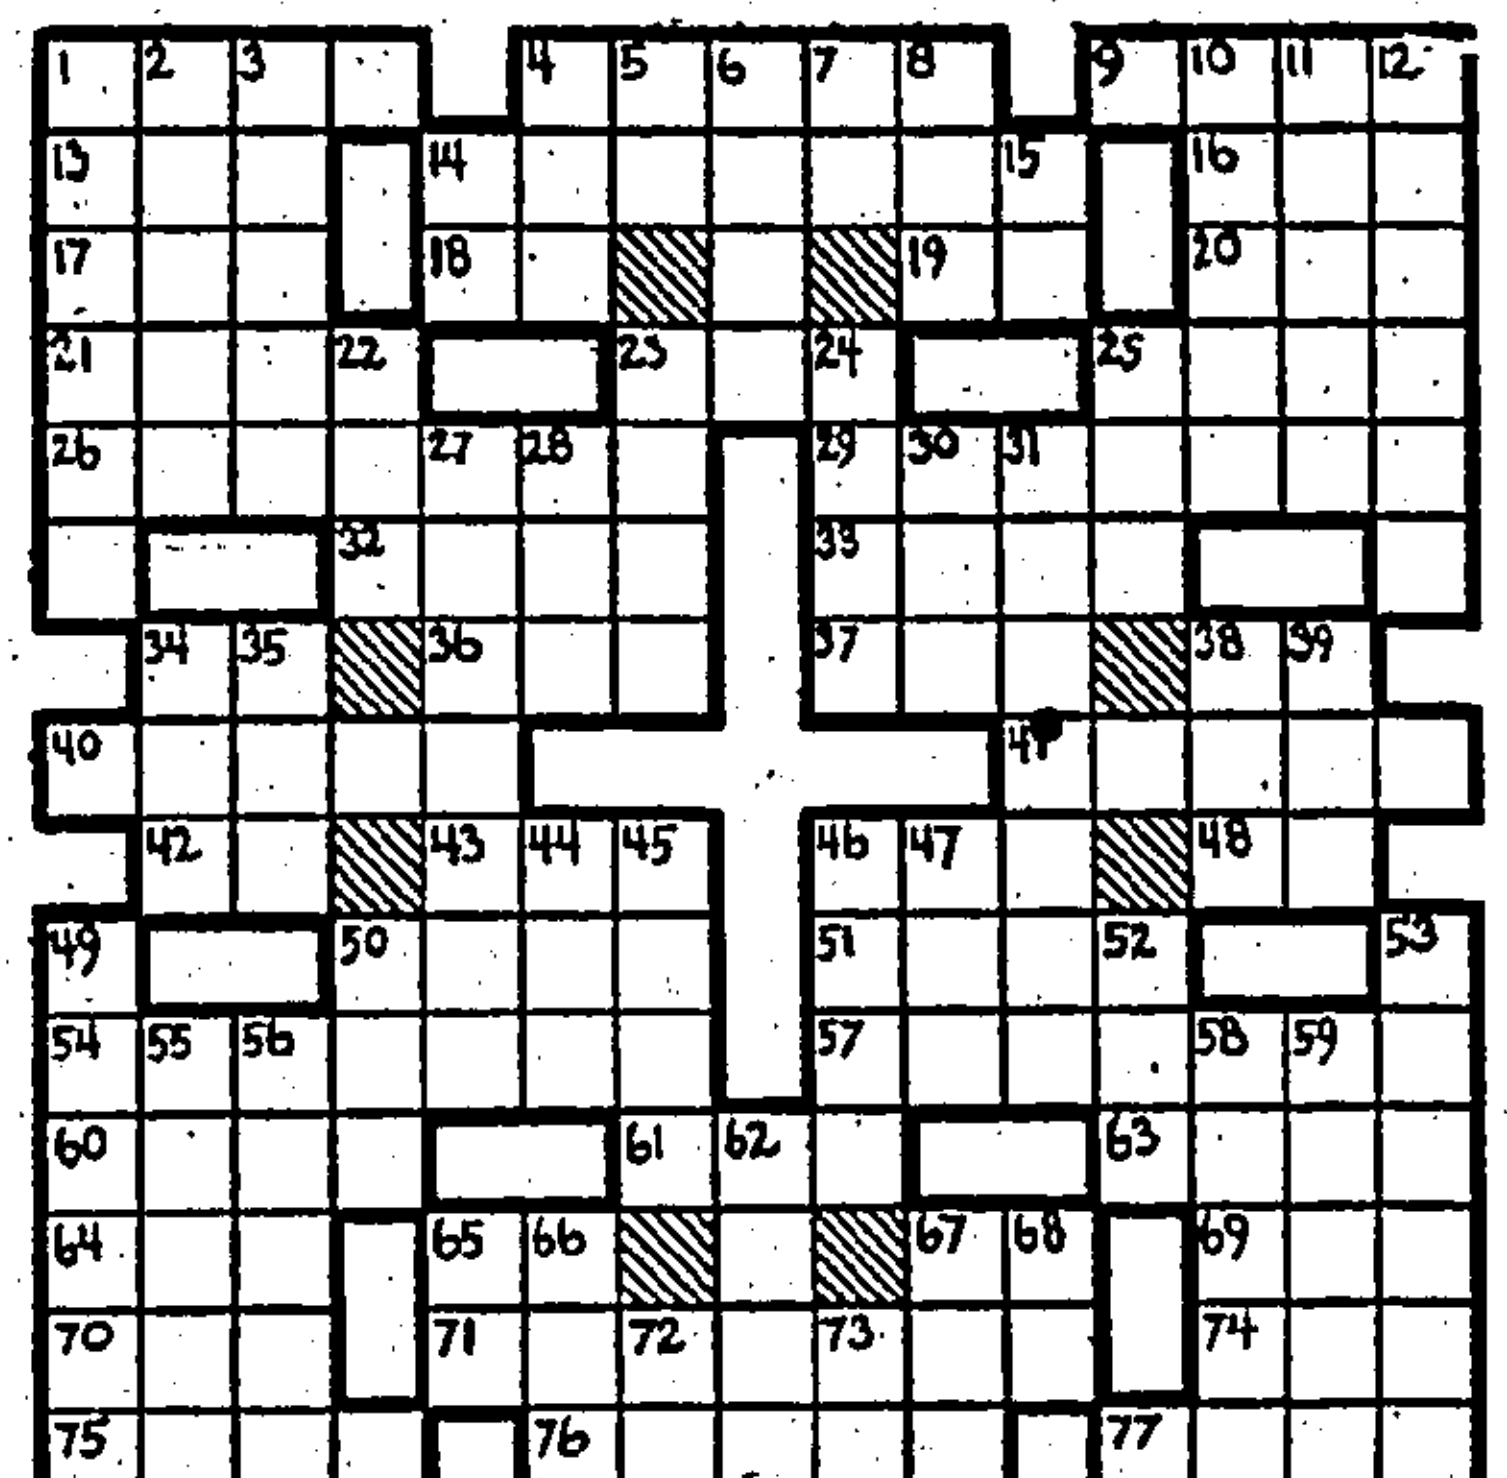

Lipsticks form an important part of modern make-up and if a good make is used its application will keep the lips from chapping and splitting. They are made in many shades and your choice must correspond with the rest of your make-up. There is an art in using lipstick as the shape of the mouth is important. Always avoid a hard line at the edges and soften it with the finger-tips. If your mouth is too large keep the colour away from the corners and edges of the lips, but deepen it towards the centre. The opposite is necessary when the mouth is very small. When the lower lip is full and the upper very thin, shape the upper lip to correspond. If you are fortunate enough to have well-shaped lips, don't try to improve on them, but just tint them slightly.

BRIDGE NOTES

WHAT IS A BIDDABLE SUIT?

(By A. E. MANNING FOSTER)

Between theory and practice there is a great gulf fixed. Players who read the records of matches and tournaments in which the experts take part are puzzled and perplexed and sometimes dismayed by the frequent departures from principles which these same authorities have recommended. They have been taught to honour and obey the great ones. They cherish their words of wisdom and try to follow their precepts. It is most upsetting, it is shattering to find that often they are like parsons who do not practise what they preach or like doctors who do not take their own medicines. Of course, the experts have provided themselves with a loophole. Flagrant departure from principles are explained as "shaded" bids or "psychic" bids. Exceptional hands and exceptional situations require special treatment. Circumstances alter cases.

It is laid down by most authorities that the minimum holding for an initial bid of One of a suit is A, J, 10, 2. This, I believe, has recently been shaded to A, J, 9, 2, provided, of course, in both cases the hand contains altogether two and a half honour tricks. A five-card suit may be called on half an honour trick, such as Q, 7, 6, 4, 2, but not on J, 7, 6, 4, 2, or 10, 7, 6, 4, 2. In actual play, however, it is not infrequent to find these experts departing from their standards. And, indeed, there is no reason why they should not. Provided the requisite compensating strength is there, it is quite sound to bid on a five-card suit even although it has not half a trick.

Holding S, K, Q, 7; H, 10, 9, 6, 4, 2; D, A, 3; C, Q, 10, 5, a player bid "One Heart," and it panned out very well, resulting, as it happened, in a game in Hearts for his side. But the bid was severely criticised by his partner, who had been school-teacher in the theory that five to the ten is unbidable. In his opinion, the holder should say "No Bid," or, perhaps, if not vulnerable, bid "One No-Trump." It will probably come as a surprise to critics of such a bid to know that this hand is actually stronger, and is likely to take more tricks with Hearts as trumps, than the holding, S, Q, 7, 4; H, A, K, Q, 4, 2; D, 10, 7; C, 10, 4, 2. You will notice this hand contains exactly the same number of high cards, an Ace, a King, two Queens, and two tens. The distribution only is different. But while almost all players would bid "One Heart" on the second combination, many, if not most, would not bid on the first.

A writer took the trouble to deal out no fewer than 400 hands, giving the dealer always the first combination, and altering the Dummy and opponents' cards each time. He found that the average number of odd tricks won was two and a quarter, while the hand made game exactly one quarter of the time, viz., in 100 deals out of 400. The second hand averaged only one and a half odd tricks, and provided game just under one-fifth of the time—in fact, seventy time out of 400. If you have the time and patience, you may like to test it for yourself over a series of deals. Further, the Heart call on hand number one is preferable, and works out better than a No-Trump bid, as is generally the case when the distribution is 5, 3, 3, 2.

A thoughtful American writer, Mr. Victor R. Smith, in a recently published book, recommends a bid of "One Heart" on a hand such as: S, A, K, Q; H, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2; D, A, K, Q; C, 5, 4. Here the Hearts are not even headed by a 10 or a 9. While an original No-Trump may be called on this hand, he states emphatically that it is preferable to bid a Heart, and it should be bid at any position at the table, even by fourth hand after three passes. He will have nothing to do with the idea inculcated by so many authorities that a suit is not biddable unless headed by a specific number or fraction of high cards. "It is," he writes, "absurd to place any such limitations and then be obliged to violate them on practically 50 per cent. of all hands dealt."

He advocates bidding a four-card major as weak as A, 10, x, x, or K, 10, 9, x, or even Q, J, x, x, and considers a minor suit biddable on A, x, x, x, or K, x, x, x, or Q, 10, 9, x with the necessary outside compensating strength to bring the holding to two and a half quick tricks. A major or minor of five cards such as 6, 5, 4, 3, 2, requires three quick tricks outside to justify an original bid. Further, after a player has bid one suit he may, on the second round of bidding, bid a major suit as weak as J, 10, x, x, with one and a half quick tricks outside. This may sound dangerous doctrine, but it is, as he points out, the practice of experts in play.

Now, the disadvantages of bidding a suit in which you hold no quick tricks, and possibly no tricks at all, are obvious at the outset. But they are more theoretical than real. If, for instance, you bid "One Heart," and the opponents secure the contract in another suit or in No-Trumps, your partner will be naturally disappointed to find that you make no tricks in Hearts at all, and will, if he is honest, condemn you as a wild and dangerous bidder. But the compensating strength in other suits will make up for your deficiencies and rightly viewed, it does not matter if you win tricks in Hearts or in side suits provided you win them somewhere. The temporary deception of your partner as to where your strength lies does not as a rule, matter. That is the defensive side. You may, however, object that such bidding is likely to be disastrous in attack, because it may lead to misunderstandings in support. But if you make it a rule not to raise your partner unless you have four of his suit or Q, x, x of it, you will find that nothing dreadful can happen.

Put it at its worst. Declarer has H, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2. You as Dummy hold 10, 9, 8, 7. There are nine Hearts between you, leaving only four for the opponents, and unless, which is extremely unlikely, all four are massed in one hand, you will, if they are divided two and two, make three tricks in the suit.

MOTOR-CYCLE SHIP FOR WORLD TRIP.

Portuguese Sailors Hit Novel Idea.

Lisbon.

Two sailors named Armando Pereira and Jaime Silva have set out from here to sail round the world in a ship they have made themselves.

It consists of a seven horsepower motor-bicycle round which they have built a watertight vessel. The travellers declare that this contrivance will take them over both land and water. They hope to go round the world in a year.—Reuter.

An issue of stamps commemorating the "Day of Potsdam," when the militarist glories of pre-war Prussia were revived at the opening of the Reichstag, is now available for use on letters.

The stamps are issued in three values, 6 pfennig (green), 12 pfennig (red), and 25 pfennig (blue), and bear the head of Frederick the Great, after a portrait by Menzel.

There is also a stamped postcard, which besides the head of Frederick the Great has a picture of the Potsdam garrison church, where the Reichstag opening session was held, occupying half the address side of the card.—Reuter.

HOLLYWOOD VERSUS G. B. SHAW.

Kay Francis Makes Caustic Comment.

FILM CENTRE STUNG.

Hollywood, California.

Stung by Mr. Bernard Shaw's remarks in New York that motion pictures preach anarchy because they often show the hero solving his problem with his fist, instead of calling upon the law, several film stars have taken up the cudgels on behalf of 100 per cent. celluloid manliness.

"Mr. Shaw forgets there are still a lot of people left in the world who like a fair fight," remarked Miss Kay Francis, who is a boxing fan as well as an actress. "Coming from an Irish philosopher, Mr. Shaw's objections to a deserved punch on the jaw sounds like treason."

James Cagney, who has done a lot of plain and fancy punning in his pictures, reminded the noted dramatist that it is the man on the receiving end of the punch who is supposed to call the cop—or the ambulance.

John Adolf, who directs George Arliss' pictures, fired still another salvo in defense of Hollywood, and hoped Shaw would hear it.

"Motion pictures reflect life, and not everyone in real life calls a policeman when in trouble," said the director.—Reuter.

TENNIS STAR WANTS TRAVEL.

Britain's Fastest Moving Player.

London.

The reason that Mary Healey, Britain's No. 1 woman tennis player, took up tennis was because she wanted to travel. She thought that if she became a woman's heart, think for a moment that one night in a Foreign Legion camp your picture alone sufficed to make hearts beat faster with thoughts of beauty. The memory of that sweet moment will remain with me for ever.

FOREIGN LEGION ROMANCE

Famous Actress Finds New Admirer.

ALICE DELYSIA'S GESTURE

Paris.

Tired warriors of the French Foreign Legion crouched around a desert camp-fire in the midst of wild country where hostile tribesmen roamed.

One of them had a copy of a London newspaper. He opened it, and together the soldiers peered at its pictures by the flickering light of the flames.

They saw a photograph of Alice Delysia—and for them the actress typified all that their lives lacked, beauty, grace, and the kindly pleasures of peace and home.

So one of them wrote to her a letter which has led Miss Delysia to organise a British branch of the "Friends of the Foreign Legion Society." This was revealed by the President of the Society in an exclusive interview with Reuter's Paris correspondent.

"The language of the letter may seem high-falutin' to Englishmen, but fiery French hearts express themselves differently," he said.

Here is the letter:

"Forgive the liberty taken in writing this letter which comes—alas!—only from the hand of a soldier in the Foreign Legion.

"Some nights ago a few of us were gathered round a camp fire in the desert in the hostile Tafilalet country of Morocco. One of us had received a copy of a London newspaper which contained a delicious photo of yourself.

"I send you this not to make a banal declaration of love, but that you may know, mademoiselle, that away off under a heart-breaking sky in the midst of the grim desert you made our hearts beat faster. The poor burnt-out hearts of crazy men from whose souls feelings have been banished for ever! That night some paused to see for a brief moment their past life rise before them while others saw the dreams that one day may come true. I shut my eyes and saw by your grace and beauty.—Alas! The happiness that surged in me was so far away that from my closed lids a tear trickled.

"Mademoiselle, you will be indulgent as you read this if you think of the kind of life I have led during seven months on outpost service. Lacking water, pleasures, rest and exposed to the frequent attacks of the terrible Arab fighters, we have lived up to the motto of our great regiment 'Honour and Fidelity.' We have put up good humouredly with the hardships of our work for civilisation, fearing neither the freezing nights nor the burning days.

"Perhaps you won't reply—how could you be interested in Legionaries! Nevertheless if you have a woman's heart, think for a moment that one night in a Foreign Legion camp your picture alone sufficed to make hearts beat faster with thoughts of beauty. The memory of that sweet moment will remain with me for ever.

"SYMPHONY OF SIX MILLION" IS A STORY FOR THE FAMILY TO SEESTUART ERWIN'S BEST OPPORTUNITY IN "MAKE ME A STAR."*Paul Muni Contributes Great Performance In Title Role Of "Scarface."

"Symphony of Six Million" is a story for the family to see, (Central).

Stuart Erwin's best opportunity in "Make Me A Star." (Queen's).

Paul Muni contributes great performance in title role of "Scarface." (King's).

"Scarface" is the greatest of all gangster pictures, chiefly because of the outstanding performance turned in by Paul Muni, and the courage shown by Howard Hughes in issuing this challenge to the American public. I regret that Mr. Will Hays saw fit to "cut" so much from the original version. To my mind, unless one has read the life history of Al Capone, the film seems disjointed and a little difficult to follow. Yet ruthless and remorseless it plows its way through several reels to an inevitable finish.

"Tony"—(Paul Muni), glimpses his boss's home and his blond "Sweetie"—(Karen Morley), and it gives him an idea. So the greatest of all Beer Barons starts his cruel reign of terror. Here we have killing for killing's sake. We see how the men deal with those who stand in their way, public or private lives.

Anne Dorak and Karen Morley give interesting character studies. The now-famous George Raft stands out, likewise Osgood Perkins. The cast is a long one but the characters just fit in and—pass on. Paul Muni dominates everything and everybody. I advise seeing this picture, because this man's acting will rank among the great performances on the screen. (King's).

"Hot Saturday."

The title gives you an idea of day. Nancy Carroll is ideally what to expect from "Hot Saturday" as the bank clerk in a small town, whose feelings are so hurt when her innocent contact with handsome Mr. Cary Grant, is misconstrued and magnified by gossip. A little fiery red-head, she decides to give them something worth while. All is set forth in a series of smoothly told episodes. Rita la Roy, Lillian Bond, William Collier and Randolph Scott do well enough to make it enjoyable. (Queen's).

"Symphony of Six Million."

"Symphony of Six Million" was named in England "Melody of Life," and the latter title seems more appropriate to me. That genius writer Fannie Hurst, gives us just a typical ghetto family. We see the two boys and the girl with loving momma and papa in the humble tenement district, where the foreign-born parents have made a home.

The acting of the children, except the boy Felix, was not too good. I became more interested when they grew up, and Irene Dunne and Ricardo Cortez came on the scene. Strangely, Miss Dunne did not look so lovely as usual, but she was sweetly sympathetic as the cripple who brings the famous surgeon back from the depths of despair and gives him back his ideas.

I don't like telling the story, but Ricardo Cortez has been acclaimed by the critics for his outstanding performance as the young surgeon. He is only happy when giving his life's work to helping the suffering poor, but for the sake of his family he makes his noble profession a business one.

Not for one moment in this artificial life in the magnificent Park Avenue establishment does the idealist find contentment. Cortez does a great piece of acting, proves how versatile he is, equally at home as hero or villain. I weakly admit I still prefer this attractive man in the type of role in which, to my way of thinking, he is far and away Clark Gable's superior.

The story is beautifully told, I shed my tears, especially in the scenes which show us the brave little blind children studying their Braille; poor little pitiful souls. It is a film for the family, and you would be unwise to miss it. I have asked a medical friend's opinion, and he assures me that the operation scene is especially well done. It is certainly gripping.

Noel Madison, (who makes an excellent gangster) is miscast as the business brother, Gregory Ratoff and Anna Appel give good performances, but the story—and Ricardo Cortez will prove to be the main attractions. (Central).

"It's A King."

"It's A King" is thought to be the best of Sydney Howard's to date. I think this sad faced Yorkshire comedian is an acquired taste. Some people think him a scream, others a bore, it just depends on whether you like his peculiar style.

The story of Ruritarian ridiculousness was written by Paul Englund, well known B.B.C. artist, and Claud, brother of the famous Jack Hulbert. Cecil Humphreys and pretty Joan Maude as the Princess give the best support. You may like it.

"The Greeks Had A Word For Them."

"The Greeks Had A Word For Them," from Zoe Akins' Broadway hit, with delightful Ina Claire—(never to be forgotten in "Royal Family"), Joan Blondell naturally for saucy, and Madge Evans, lovely and sympathetic, as the three Messengers of Riverside Drive who willingly trade their cheery company for diamonds.

Give a hand to Lowell Sherman who directed so perfectly, and acts the pianist (who likes himself) as only he can. Grand artist this old-time movie favourite. It is a smart, amusingly different, a little chance in this over-crowded presentation.

Shows us all the cute tricks of the feminine gold diggers, but it is emphatically NOT for the children. (King's).

"Penalty Of Fame."

Low Ayres is back with a bang in "The Penalty Of Fame," somewhat titled "Okay America" your while, and Erwin's study after his memorable performance leaves nothing wanting in an ar- in "All Quiet," this handsome young actor was more or less stamped as a sensitive boy, but now we see a new personality in this role of the wise-cracking Columnist writer.

The story is clever and the combination of gossip and gangster holds the attention to the dramatic finish. What a formula, suspense, romance and thrills. They say: for the eyes, this beautiful musical Walter Winchell, the most famous production has no superior, was the only woman in France film. At least this kind of writer, claim, is the biggest find, musical, so far, only exists in the States, by since Lawrence Tibbett.

Nancy Carroll, starring in "Hot Saturday" at the Queen's Theatre.

but I think the day is not far distant when the "Keyhole" kind of reporting will be part of every nation's newspapers.

Sometimes he is cruel, unjust, but more often truthful and we all know truth hurts, but is best for us. Low Ayres plays the part for all he is worth, so full of charm that you cannot help liking him.

Tay Garnett the director gives us sensationalism, brisk action and a smart pace throughout this tale which was no doubt written around recent kidnapping cases. It avoids the morbid by being treated in a semi-humorous vein, so that one will not take it too seriously.

Maurice O'Sullivan as the secretary who is in love with her employer, is quite likeable. Rollo Lloyd gives a nice little "Bit." Louis Calhern, Allan Dinehart, Henry Armetta, Walter Catlett are a few among the excellent supporting cast. This is the sort of picture I want to see three times, and it gives handsome Low Ayres a new lease of life. Put this on your "Must See List." (Central).

"Beauty Secrets of the Stars."

News of important interest to the Feminine "Fans." With "Broken Wing" we have a one-reeler in "technicolor" entitled "Beauty Secrets of the Stars." The sex-appeal of the Hollywood girls is world famous. From this film I assure you I learnt quite a few "tips" and you cannot fail to do likewise.

The main attraction is the Paramount film "Broken Wing" with Lupe Velez, Leo Carrillo and Melvyn Douglas. I know the plot sounds like a comic opera, but with such a cast you know you are in for bright entertainment. Lupe, the adorable one, lives on a ranch covered by flashing attractive Leo, falls from sky, with loss of memory. Love blooms in the garden.

You hear something said about a wife but that is easily brushed aside by hero and heroine. A dear little bird whistling in the trees, brings back memories of France, and we leave the theatre knowing everyone, except the bandit will be happy ever after. Lupe is one of my pet fancies. Her films are always an attraction. (Queen's).

"Make Me A Star."

Stuart Erwin finds his best opportunity in this new version of "Merton of the Movies," now renamed "Make Me A Star." You can't help feeling sympathetic for the poor simpleton who takes a course in acting, in order to crash the gates of the cruel heart-breaking studios of Hollywood. We have some very funny gags, and the scenes taken round Paramount prove vastly entertaining, especially if you have not been among those who have had similar ghost-old-time movie favourite. It is a smart, amusingly different, a little chance in this over-crowded presentation.

You will not only see the funny side of it, but the pathos of it too. Joan Blondell as the hard-boiled "Extra" girl who helps our hero, scores almost as big as Stuart. It is pleasant, unpretentious entertainment almost as big as Stuart. It is pleasant, unpretentious entertainment almost as big as Stuart.

"Tell Me To-night." There is the greatest treat in Kiepusa, the Polish tenor in the Gaumont-British film "Tell Me To-night," or as they called it in the States, "Be Mine To-night." For pure lyrical beauty and a feast for the eyes, this beautiful musical is no superior, was the only woman in France film. At least this kind of writer, claim, is the biggest find, musical, so far, only exists in the States, by since Lawrence Tibbett.

The story is based on the mistaken identity motif, and the whole thing was "Shot" in Switzerland. The scenery is marvellous. We also have another "find" in Magda Schneider, who like the star, has played this film in three different languages. Sonne, Hale proves a great comedian, Edmund Gwenn, Betty Chester and Athene Seyler are a few among the British support. More of this later, but STRONGLY advised.

"Secrets of the French Police." Coming also are Gwill Andre and Gregory Ratoff in "Secrets of the French Police," very gripping and exciting—and Gwill is lovely. A film that will make you sit up and take notice is due soon—Lee Tracy and Lupe Velez in "Half-Naked Truth." Shows us how the Press-agent can make or ruin a star. Grand work from all concerned and hilariously entertaining. Due soon at the Central.

"The Oriental Theatre." Chinese pictures are proving tremendously popular at the Oriental, especially when Shanghai's Queen Butterfly Wu is the star, but the Management also promise a strong line-up of the biggest success from the States. George O'Brien in "Gay Caballero," "Bad Girl" that outstanding success with Sally Eilers and James Dunn, "Black Camel" the adventure of Charlie Chan, and Marian Nixon and Ralph Bellamy in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm." All due in the month of June at the Oriental, and if you missed these shows up town be sure to visit this beautiful new theatre in Wanchai.

I'M TELLING YOU.

Boris Karloff is in Berlin having a look-see. Gary Cooper is asking $125,000 for one picture with B.I.P. Hollywood says that Phillip Holmes is married to Florence, daughter of Grantland Rice, the Sports writer. She is divorced from husband No. 1.

Morton Downey and wife Barbara Bennett have adopted a two year old Irish baby, so that their own son will have a companion. Sylvia Sydney has promised to appear in "Liliom" on the stage with the Pasadena Players. Elissa Landi will play the lead in "I Loved You Wednesday" for Fox with exotic Myrna Loy borrowed from Metro, and Mary Boland from Paramount.

Edmund Goulding will direct the musical, "Hollywood Revue" for Metro. Another loss to the films. Grumpy Fred Kerr has died in London aged seventy-five. Born in London, he lived many years in New York as a journalist. Blanche Sweet, once famous film star has filed bankruptcy proceedings. Billie Dove has not married Howard Hughes, but a ranch owner named Kenaston.

Anna May Wong adores Europe, and is now holidaying there, so is Dennis King. Thelma Todd is the delight of the English reporters, she is wildly entertaining.

Jeanette MacDonald will co-star at Metro with Ramon Novarro in "Cat and the Fiddle." Hurray—now that may mean that some day we shall have her as the "Merry Widow"—and who says Maurice Chevalier as Danilo?—I definitely say yes.

The secretary of the Valentine Association at the Italian Hospital in Soho was recently presented to the Duke and Duchess of York. This is one place that holds the famous film star's memory ever dear.

Charlie Chaplin in order to avoid speaking in his next film, will play the part of a deaf-mute. The Ben Lyons and Sally Eilers are the most popular of all the recent Hollywood visitors to England. Sally Eilers has left Root Gibson at their ranch, but she is revelling in London—and incidentally are the British Studios after her?—You can bet your life on that.

FRENCH DUCHESS HONOURED.Led Hunt When Nearly 90 Years Old.

Paris. A forest "square" is to immortalize a Duchess who hunted at the age of 80.

One of the clearings in the Forest of Rambouillet where the Duchess d'Uzes so frequently rode in "many hunts," is to be named after her.

The Duchess, who died recently, still led her own hunt through the forest when approaching the nineties. She of whom was granted the mediaeval title of "Lieutenant of Wolf Hunting."—Reuter.

"MASS PRODUCTION" BOGEYEven The Ancients Practised It.*MAYAN DISCOVERY

Chicago, Illinois.

Mass production, blamed by many as a contributing factor to depressions—is not new. Even the ancients practised it, says Dr. Frans Blom, an archeologist of Tulane University.

Dr. Blom recently completed an expedition into the recesses of Yucatan.

There, he said, he discovered evidences of unit production and fabrication apparently practised during the Maya civilisation that flourished in Central America. Dr. Blom obtained measurements and data regarding the nunnery at Uxmal, a replica of which will be exhibited at the World's Fair in Chicago.

"The stone used in the building," the professor reported, "was cut and shaped to standard size by the contractor who supplied and delivered it ready to be placed by the architects and builders. Just how these huge blocks were transported through the jungles is unknown, for the Mayans had no steel or iron tools and were not familiar with the principle of the wheel. Probably they were drawn on skids or sleds. All were hewn and shaped with stone instruments."

"Another 'factory' existed for the production of clay idols which evidently had a place in all Mayan homes."—Reuter.

CONVICT DIES TO ESCAPE PRISON.Carried Poison For 15 Years.

Butte, Montana.

A little vial of poison, constant companion for 15 years of Harry Bushnell, an escaped convict and murder suspect, has served its purpose.

The convict who was caught here was found dead in his cell one morning. A note in one of his socks told of his suicide plans and related how, ever since his escape from a prison camp in 1918, he had carried the poison with him for use when he was caught.—Reuter.

ISTANBUL'S LAST GLENGARRYTelephone Co. Director Retires.*TWICE ARRESTED DURING WAR

Istanbul.

The only man in Turkey allowed to wear a glengarry, both in his office and outside, is returning to his home in Glasgow after 21 years in Turkey.

He is Mr. Douglas-Watson, who resigned recently as the director of the Istanbul Telephone Company. His position was filled by Mr. J. M. Anderson. He is a Glaswegian, too.

Friends prepared a warm farewell for Mr. Douglas-Watson, who is the best-known Scotsman in Istanbul. He has not definitely decided where he will reside, but he intends to take a long holiday after what he describes as "21 years" gruelling work.

When Mr. Douglas-Watson first came to Turkey the Sultan tried to make him wear a fez. But the Scotsman preferred his glengarry and has worn it constantly during his 21 years here.

The Telephone Company, according to Mr. Watson, is the sole remaining British concession in Istanbul. It was he who caused an innovation in telephone services when he required the local exchange operator to answer in either of two languages—Turkish or French.

Mr. Watson kept his post here all through the Great War and was twice arrested before finally escaping to Great Britain.

He is one of the most familiar figures in Istanbul, known to everyone as he rode through the streets in an open motor-car, his glengarry perched on his flowing white hair.—Reuter.

Irish Free State.

In the Irish Free State, the bill for the elimination of the Oath of Allegiance from the Constitution has become law. After being carried by Dail Eireann it was despatched with all speed to, and as promptly signed by, the Governor-General, the amiable Mr. Buckley, successor to Dr. McNeill, whose position was made intolerable by Mr. de Valera's Government, and who, rather than see the representative of the British Crown a target for studied insults, resigned. Mr. Buckley, also, upon his accession to office took the oath which he has now forsworn without pang of conscience. But Ireland is a land of paradoxes. The Senate of the Free State did its best to resist the bill. By passing an amendment making the latter subject to the Constitution, the Senate attempted to neutralise its operation. But the powers of the second Chamber are limited to the delay of a measure of which it disapproves. Dail Eireann has the last word, which does not require the sanction of the Senate. In his election campaign in January, Mr. de Valera made oath abolition a leading issue. His party did not fare as well as they hoped, but since he has persuaded a majority of the popular House to accept his policy in this matter, the decision, for better or worse, has been registered. Not infrequently gestures of self-assertion in this vein are afterwards regretted. The Oath of Allegiance is incorporated in Article 17 of the Constitution, which was inserted in fulfillment of the stipulations enshrined in the treaty. In reference to it, Mr. Cosgrave, then whom the interests of the Free State have had no sturdier champion said: "It is a binding Oath, and when I take it I mean to keep it. I believe that a public representative who takes that Oath should do so with the intention of keeping it." Its terms are more elastic than those of declarations of fealty to which other dominions subscribe. It provides for a pledge "to bear true faith and allegiance to the Constitution of the Irish Free State," and to "be faithful to his Majesty... in virtue of the common citizenship of Ireland and Great Britain and adherence to and membership of the group of nations forming the British Commonwealth." In that, said Mr. Cosgrave, there is nothing of which any honest Irishman should be ashamed. The Republicans thought otherwise. At first they refused to be sworn, thereby disqualifying themselves from sitting in Dail Eireann. Subsequently they—one cannot say repented or relented—but changed their tune on grounds of expediency, taking a perfunctory oath with tongue in cheek, protesting the while that the ceremony, "an empty formula," was of no importance. Preferable to this casuistical subterfuge is the frank intimation that the obligation to swear allegiance to the Crown has, in a phrase favoured by the Soviet, been "liquidated." Where does the Free State now stand in the Empire? The Imperial Parliament has abdicated, the Oath of Allegiance has been abolished, and appeals to the committee of the Privy Council have been deprived of legal validity. What links remain, except the rather nebulous one of the Governor-Generalship? The repudiation of the land annuity payments was, so to speak, a domestic affair. It provoked tariff reprisals, but did not in itself affect the Imperial connection. The abolition of the oath is in a different category. If the Free State does not owe allegiance to the King, what tie attaches her to the Empire, of which the King is the head and symbol? Surely the Free State is now, by all accepted standards, as much a foreign country, as Germany or Guatemala. She forfeits any right to British protection. She forfeits any claim to preferential treatment accorded to members of the Empire. Although Southern Irish already domiciled elsewhere in the Empire will not be affected by the new dispensation, in future those who enter British territory will be technically aliens unless and until they are naturalised. To cut the painter would reduce the Free State to the level of a minor Latin-American republic with a large debt, a small revenue, no navy, and considerable secondary industries. That would be the logical outcome of the abolition of the oath, and the Free State could not complain if Britain regarded the severance of the sole surviving bond as tantamount to secession. But Ireland has the lucky knack of having it both ways. No doubt the Free State will expect to continue to enjoy the privileges conferred by partnership in the Empire, and it is quite probable that long-suffering Britain will continue to grant them.

Senor Julian Roca, the Vice-president of the Argentine, is the son of a famous father.
In the 'sixties and 'seventies Colonel Roca was the man who suppressed the various Indian rebellions which threatened the existence of Buenos Aires. In their gratitude the Argentine people made him a General and elected him President.
As the Argentines are likely to be no less grateful to the son who has so successfully scalped the English, there is no hesitation in predicting that Senor Julian Roca will also achieve the Presidency.

His slightly-built, spectacled figure is familiar in London, which he visits every around Christmas, and he has been a generous benefactor to the Natural History Museum in South Kensington.

His fortunes have been only slightly affected by the slump because, as he himself says, he spends most of his time in the South Seas in scientific exploration.
In his cutter Zaga he has visited innumerable obscure Pacific islands, and his scientists have discovered many new specimens of strange fish and stranger plants. Rennell Island, the scene of the present expedition, is one of the last unspoiled fields for anthropologists.

PERSECUTION OF THE
JEWSMOVEMENT NOT CONFINED TO GERMANY

"CALCULATED EXPLOITATION"

(By G. M. Thomson.)

A wave of anti-Semitism is sweeping across the world. It is not confined to Germany, although the crisis of the movement is at present in that country.

The reason for that is plain enough. The Nazis made political capital out of anti-Semitism in the campaign which brought them to power.

When he came into office Hitler would no doubt have liked to take a different course. But the record of his own past utterances prevented him from doing so. He was confronted with the difficult task of controlling the wave of anti-Semitism he had aroused.

Apologists for Germany try to justify the campaign against the Jews. They say that the German revolution of 1918 was in a great measure a Jewish revolution. If there have been acts of violence against Jews they are no more brutal than the repression of the Nationalist elements in Germany during the 1918 revolution.

Last night I saw a motion picture. It showed Jewish lawyers in Germany waiting in a queue to be admitted to the Law Courts to be given permission to practise. The Nazi position is that only Jews who served in the war can plead in the courts.

The argument made to me was that the picture showed no signs of any violence being done to these men. They were not being oppressed in any visible way. That is all very well, but, of course, the mere act of excluding a man from his livelihood is in itself an act of oppression.

But the German apologists say: "Our law courts had fallen into the hands of the Jews. German justice had become a Jewish monopoly." They further say, "You produce a long list of so-called persecutions of Jews. But many of these men were persecuted as Communists. The Communist Party in Germany is a Jewish Party."

The strange paradox of this is that in Russia, where the Communist Party is in power, a powerful anti-Semitic movement has broken out. It has already resulted in the expulsion of many Jews from the Communist Party, and it is likely that before long it will engulf Litvinoff.

The leaders of the party acknowledge that a movement against the Jews has been carried on. They say it must cease. But it is one thing to promise to stop it and another to bring it to an end.

A Warning
The Jews should beware of this. They have every right to resent the treatment of their co-religionists in Germany. But they should not allow themselves to be brigaded by the Socialists for political purposes. And they should certainly have nothing to do with Communism.

Communism is a movement very dangerous to Jews. The most serious of the charges levelled at the Jews is that which suggests an association between them and the Communist movement. This charge has had much to do with the oppression of the Jews in other countries. Communism and Jewry are sometimes considered to be identical, not only in Germany but elsewhere.

In Austria and Hungary, for instance, the persecutions carried out by the Communists are blamed on the Jews, because of the fact that Jews took a prominent part in the Communist risings in those countries.

Distinguished citizens of Munich were held as hostages by the Communists during the Kurt Eisner rising. Now these men are bitterly anti-Semitic. No argument will persuade them that the Jews were not responsible for the Communist insurrection in Bavaria.

I urge the leaders of the Jews in Britain to warn their people not to allow themselves to be made the catpaws of any political party. Not to be exploited by the Socialists. Above all, not to become the tools of Communism.

Anti-Semitism in France
In France anti-Semitism is a powerful and dangerous force, never far from the surface, ready at all times to burst into flames.

The other day, at a French race-meeting the favourite in one race, a horse with a Jewish owner, disappointed the crowd. Instantly there was a great shout, "Where is Hitler? Send for Hitler!"

But the most amazing outburst of anti-Semitism comes from Japan, where there are not a thousand Jews in the whole population. Yet one of the ripples of the world-wide wave of anti-Jewry was washed up on the shores of far Nippon.

A meeting was held in Tokyo, attended by 2,500 Japanese. A fiery anti-Jew speech was delivered by a Japanese general, and a song was sung with the stirring refrain "Oh, punish the Jewish people!"

What of Britain? What is her role in the anti-Semitic movement? There is no anti-Semite feeling here. Indeed, there is strong sympathy for the Jews.

But the Jewish leaders should warn some of their people that dangerous elements are attempting to exploit Jewish feeling for selfish political purposes.

A Socialist Manoeuvre.
The Socialist Party is trying to do so. The Socialists have a notion that they can strengthen their own disrupted standing and restore their lost prestige by stirring up the fear of Fascism.

They have only one object in raising the Jewish bogey. It is to persuade Trade Unionists to return to the Socialist political fold.

Fascism, they say, is the great enemy of the Trade Unions, and the Socialist Party the only bulwark against the Fascist menace.

But they must make the Fascist peril seem a reality. It is here that the Jews become useful to them.

The anti-Fascist cause can be advanced by playing on the hostility of the Jews to the German Fascist leaders. This is what the Socialists are doing. It is a deliberate and calculated piece of exploitation, carried out by individuals and by some of the Socialist newspapers.

POSTMARK SLOGANS

Canberra, F. C. T.

The annual report of the Postmaster-General's Department, for 1931-2, tabled in the House of Representatives yielded some interesting information. For instance, the number of letters reported missing and undelivered was 12,888, or one in every 50,000 handled.

Other interesting points from the report are:—
A total of $62,149 was found in letters sent to the dead letter office.

Cash on delivery parcels sent by mail showed an increase of 10.24 per cent; postal notes sent increased in value by £275,795; it cost the department $84,068 to send $575,560 free telegrams to supply weather and shipping information; five slogans were used on postmarks last year.

With the exception of New Zealand, the ratio of telegrams to population in the Commonwealth is the highest in the world, but Western Australia exceeded New Zealand; canvassing for the telegraph services brought £13,000 worth of new business to the department.

There are 22 broadcasting stations in the capital cities of the Commonwealth and 28 in country districts.

There are 404 accidents to departmental motor vehicles for every 1,000 miles travelled.

Of 726 suggestions for improvement received from officers of the department during the year 31 were adopted, ranging from new inventions to improvements in official forms and window cleaning methods.—Reuter.

New York, To-day. Jimmy Foxx, the 1932 home run king who has been out of the game for some weeks as the result of a twisted knee, made a magnificent comeback yesterday when he banged out three homers to give the Athletics a 14-10 win over the Yankees, world champions.

In the same game Babe Ruth hit his twelfth homer of the season. The Bambino now leads Foxx by only one in the home run parade. Lou Gehrig who tied Ruth in 1931 for the crown, also hit a homer. It was his ninth.

Of Commons.

London. Tea was the most popular meal at the House of Commons last year. More than 83,943 teas were served on the 144 days on which the House sat, as compared with 111,557 in 1931, when the House sat on 175 days.

Not a single breakfast was served last year, showing the absence of all-night sittings, which in 1931 involved the serving of 170 breakfasts. These facts are embodied in the recently published report of the Select Committee appointed to control the kitchen and refreshment rooms of the House of Commons.

The receipts for last year were £30,971, as compared with £37,045 for the previous year.—Reuter.

NEW OFFICERS OF PEAK CHURCHAnnual Meeting Held Yesterday.

$300 ALLOCATED

At the annual meeting of worshippers of the Peak Church held in the Cathedral Hall yesterday afternoon, it was decided to allocate $200 to the finances of St. John's Cathedral and a grant of $50 each to the Hong Kong Benevolent Society and the Society for Protection of Children.

Mr. P. Jacks presided, and was supported by Messrs. J. W. C. Bonnar and T. H. King (Trustees), Rev. E. G. Powell, Mr. M. W. Turner, Hon. Treasurer; Rev. N. V. Hallward, Acting Hon. Secretary in the absence of Dean Swan; and Lady Pollock.

The Secretary's report, which was adopted, was as follows:—A Holy Communion has been celebrated on every Sunday throughout the year at 8.00 a.m.; the average attendance on ordinary Sundays being 122. On Christmas Day there were 85 Communicants and on Easter Day 74. Holy Baptism has been administered on six occasions by Anglican clergy. One service was held during the year for the Scandinavian Community and was conducted by Dr. Reichelt.

Mr. Turner mentioned that the balance was better than last year, and there had been a considerable decrease in clergy fees. The latter was largely due to the fact that the Rev. N. Evans refused to accept fees. He hoped the expenditure for fabrics would not be so heavy this year as in the past two years when $2,500 was spent.

A vote of $150 for the purchase of matting for two new frontals; and $50 for new palms for the west door, were approved.

The following officers were re-elected:—Trustees.—Mr. J. W. C. Bonnar, Mr. P. Jacks, Mr. T. H. King. Committee.—The Trustees, the Bishop of Victoria, Rev. E. G. Powell, the Dean (Hon. Secretary), Mr. M. W. Turner (Hon. Treasurer), and Lady Pollock.

To-Day's Short Story.

THE G.S.
BUTIONBy Geoffrey Moss.

I NEVER met him. No one could even tell me his name. I only know what he did. The memory of that still flourishes in that land of willows, all along the swift wide Danube, from Vienna which seems but at the back of Switzerland, down even to Belgrade which is already almost the Orient.

He was young, he was cheerful. His cap was often at the back of his head and a cigarette in the corner of his smile. He drifted in, hung fecklessly about Budapest he drifted out again and vanished, returning no doubt to some inconspicuous life but leaving behind him a glamour which may yet grow into a proverb. He was drably dressed, heavily laden, a reddish-headed youth who groused overmuch, a British private soldier.

For enjoying himself he had genius, and he soaked up the pleasures of the town as a sponge soaks up water. He took kindly to the cheap white wine, to the girls with thin limbs and eye-brows, shades darker than their hair; he took even to the fiddling of the tziganes. And in consequence of all this he was given to overstaying his pass and to being slovenly on parade. But, as there was no means of replacing him, he remained, a problem to the officer, and one of the many isolated detachments which acted as a guard for the British Missions, diplomatic and military, in the one-time kingdom of Hungary.

For lack of his actual name we will call him Sandy. Spring came late, and wistful breezes fluttered over the Danube. But in that shrill and open country and in those quiet old-fashioned towns there was no answering joy. Peace, which had come at last, had brought only disillusionment, despair, the end of hopes.

HOW WARSHIPS ARE NAMED.Result of Careful Research.

THE 1933 LIST

London.

How do Warships get their names?

The question "arises" in connection with the House of Commons debate on the Navy Estimates. In the course of his speech moving their adoption, the First Lord of the Admiralty, Sir B. Eyre-Monsell (himself a Naval Commander) gave a list of the new ships to be built as follows:

Cruisers (large)....Apollo
Cruisers (small)....Galatea
Flotilla leader....Faulkner
Destroyers....Forester, Fury, Fearless, Foresight, Foxhound, Fortune, Fame, and Firedrake.
Submarines....Clyde, Grampus and Salmon.
Sloops....Lowestoft, Welling-ton, Harrier, Hussar.

After the list had been announced, a Member created a certain amount of merriment by his interjection: "What about the Lissimouth?" (The Prime Minister was then delivering his speech appealing for disarmament before the Disarmament Conference in Geneva).

Actually, the naming of new warships is done with the greatest deliberation and after careful research by the Board of Admiralty.

The records stored in the Admiralty Library are scrutinised, and from ships which have shown a "good naval record" names are taken to be passed on to units of the future.

Practically all the names given to new warships are thus memories of Naval triumphs of the past.—Reuter.

THREE BOYS Bitten BY DOG

Three Chinese boys were sent to the Government Civil Hospital for treatment to dog bites which they received yesterday from a mongrel of unknown breed.

The animal was destroyed by Chinese coolies who used a bamboo pole.

over those thousand miles of plain and willow. Down in starving Pest a rudeness Government drifted on towards Bolshevism. Up on the hill of Buda, amongst the ancient forts and wise old palaces, the little British detachment mounted guard, played endless card games, swore and groused. And ever and again they looked down at the swift Danube, at the airy cobweb bridges flung across it, at the sweep of splendid river front and so to where, beyond smokeless factory chimneys stood like pillars of warning against the faraway horizon of the Plain.

The sergeant of the detachment was neat, controlled, irreproachable, remote alike from the men and from his officer. Sometimes he used to go to the edge of the hill, stare down at the maze of streets, and wonder what would happen when Bolshevism came. Revolution was in the wind. It seemed to travel like a blight. Private Sandy, of all people, he had heard 'airing views, views which must have been thrust at him in the cafes. The sergeant considered this without bitterness. Drink.

TO-MORROW'S STORY.

To-morrow's story will be "The Laughing Camel," by S. Andrew Wood.

women, music! They played the deuce with a youngster.

Slowly the spring of 1919 spread. And next morning Sandy was in trouble again. He had overstayed his pass and had come back, neither tidy nor coherent. Extra sentry duty and the other minor punishments which could be devised did not seem to have their effect: and even now only lack of funds worried him.

"What the hell do I care?" he remarked, as he flung into the billet after his telling-off. "Topsy talked. That don't signify. What's it matter what the blighter says? But I'm broke and a chap's got to 'ave cash.... Otherwise there ain't no life for 'im."

Gradually political theories evolved behind his easy fecklessness. "Got to 'ave cash," he used to say. "Got to 'ave it.... or got to get it some'ow. The blinking banks are full of it, aren't they; even 'ere. 'Ose cash? Yours and mine? Chaps what fought? No blinking...." He would shake his curl, dangle his legs over the end of his bed and the cigarette would waver in the corner of his smile. "I've been 'earing things, I 'ave," he would state darkly. "Know what's going to 'appen down in the town there? Eh? Bolshevism, that's what's going to 'appen. Might 'appen in other places, too, mightn't it? Eh? There's going to be a share-out everywhere, one of these fine days. And I'm going to be in the front rank. There's a time coming. The sands is running 'out. Yep!"

As soon as he was free to, he had another night in the town and, after that, his views strengthened. Perhaps homeward-bound in the small hours he had noticed in a darkened by-street a chink of light beneath a door, had shouldered in and found a scruffy gathering, all at once ominously silent; perhaps in the back of cheap bars men with coat collars up and hands inside pockets had muttered to him in school-learned English.

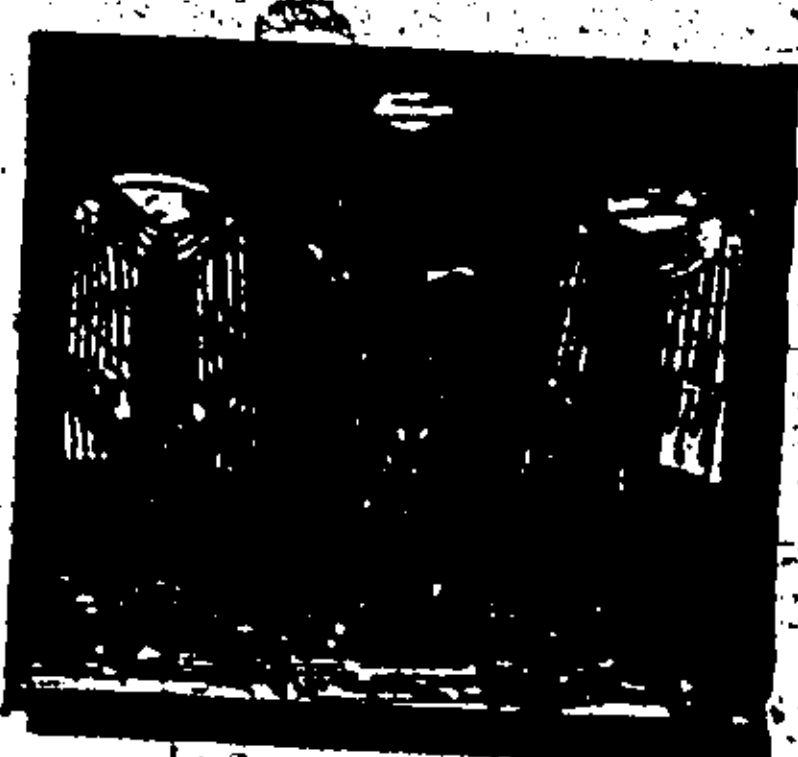

"Over in Pest the sands ran out quickly enough. The Government snuffed. Bolshevism was proclaimed, property of all kinds seized. Across the river, up in Buda, the foreign missions held endless conferences. Something must be done; the military were strong on that. But not in a hurry; the diplomats insisted.

Down in Pest men and women vanished and there were rumours of torture and murder in the cellars of that big hotel which had become the Soviet Headquarters.

Private Sandy coming from duty slipped his equipment on to his bed and addressed the sleeping room. "Looting down there, chaps. What you think? Eh? If any ever came my way...."

"Stow it, can't ye," a voice urged from the darkness. "You've got to get 'old of cash some'ow. Private Sandy went on in a rhetoric of whiskeys. "Might be right now. Eh? The sands is running 'out. Yep! That phrase pleased him. Yep, the sands is running 'out."

BOWLS CHAMPIONS AT HOME TO KOWLOON C.C. TO-MORROW

LAWN BOWLS

LUNNY QUALIFIES FOR BOWLS TITLE

Ribeiro's Bad Luck In First Round.

CHAMPIONS' SPEY ROYAL CUP TEAM

To Meet Yacht Club On Wednesday

(By SHORT HEAD.)

J. F. LUNNY (Electric) yesterday qualified to meet H. Hampton in the Second Round of the Colony Championship when he beat F. V. Ribeiro (Recreio) by 21-15 on the Civil Service green.

The game was abandoned, owing to bad light on Tuesday evening with Lunny leading 20-15. Yesterday he scored the necessary shot for victory on the first head.

It was bad luck on Ribeiro, as he led until poor light greatly handicapped his play—he wears spectacles. It was another case of a player leading and not caring to appeal against the light when things were going against him.

THE following are First Round results in the Civil Service Handicap Bowls tournament: R. R. Wood (scr.) beat H. Lockart (scr.).

J. F. McGowan (+1) beat R. R. Davies (+4).

F. Jones (-5) beat H. Major (+6).

S. Eccleshall (scr.) beat L. Luck (scr.) 21-9.

N. J. Bebbington (-2) beat R. Phillips (-4).

J. Pooler (+5) beat E. W. Simmonds (scr.) 21-16.

THE Hong Kong Electric play their Spey Royal Cup match against Tai Koo D.R.C. on the Craignower green next Monday, June 12 at 5 p.m. they will be represented by the following:

A. Tarbuck, A. F. Paul, S. Deacon and G. F. Lunny (skip). Reserve—F. Norington.

TAIKOO will be represented by D. Peoples, J. Watson, J. C. Chalmers and W. Wotherspoon (skip).

THE Second Round Champion ship game between B. W. Bradbury (C.C.C.) and L. Whant (C.S.C.C.), scheduled for next Wednesday, has been postponed owing to the Spey Royal Cup match between Craignower and the Yacht Club falling on the same day.

CRAIGNOWER, dual champions, are to make a determined bid this year to wrest the Spey Cup from the Recreio. On Wednesday they will be represented by the following in their tie against the Yacht Club on the Police green at 5 p.m.:—E. L. Buchanan, B. W. Bradbury, H. Beer, and U. M. Omar (skip).

CRAIGNOWER CHAMPIONSHIP.

Basa, Bradbury And Arculli Draw Byes.

OMAR TO PLAY LAMMERT

THE following is the draw in correct order for the Craignower Cricket Club Lawn Bowls Championship:

Byes into Second Round: W. B. Musket v. R. Basa, H. Beer v. C. S. Rossett.

First Round: J. Johnston v. C. S. Simmons, J. Cavanagh v. Y. Abbas.

E. Tuck v. J. Driscoll, J. Lunny v. Ward.

W. V. Field v. E. L. Buchanan, D. Rumjahn v. A. E. Coates.

U. M. Omar v. L. E. Lammert.

Byes into Second Round: E. V. Pearce, B. W. Bradbury v. J. S. Landolt, G. Duncan v. E. A. Arculli.

After a year's practice, enter the club competitions and all the tournaments you can. This is the best way to acquire experience and "that competitive temperament."

When instructing the beginner, I have found it helpful to advise him to steady his wood in its proper alignment—by means of the other hand placed to the side, preparatory to the actual delivery.

STARTING TIMES FOR FANLING

Sunday's Pairings.

The following were the starting times of the Royal Hong Kong Golf Club for Fanling on Sunday:—
Old Course
a.m.
8.30 Major McIntyre, E. A. Rodgers, 8.50 N. K. Littlejohn, H. N. Williams.
Silver Spoon:—were awarded to Robertson and Clouston for returning the highest score in their respective units and to Waterton, Watson, and Woodman for high gun at the respective ranges.

Hints for the Bowls Novice

Style And Stance In Delivery

By H. P. WEBBER

To start right is the great thing. Do not think that it is a waste of time to watch from the bank. You will see some good styles and many bad ones, and you will be enabled to choose a suitable one to express your personality in the best possible manner.

There is the free-actioned athletic style and the limited style, and though most bowlers on a census would favour the former, it would hardly be fair to say that it is essentially better than the other.

Freedom and power in action is, of course, invaluable for "sluggish" greens, but for very fiery greens and also for indoor rink play, a restricted crouch may, other things being equal, get the best results. The weather conditions in England favour the free, striding-forward style. Whatever style you adopt must be suited to your particular type of figure; comfort is essential.

Body Movement.

The older person, inclined to weight, would be wise to choose an action not involving much movement of the body, even though it entails some limitation of ease and freedom.

Practise the action of your delivery at other times than upon the green, holding a wood but not letting it go; the smoother your delivery comes the nearer you will be to success.

The drawing shot is the basic shot in bowls, so confine yourself to it, until you have mastered both forehand and backhand play and some of the more difficult shots.

In friendly games choose to play "lead"—you can then stick to the "drawing game"—that is to say, trying to get as near the jack as possible without indulging in firing or fancy shots.

Moreover, you will be availing yourself of practice in throwing the jack, a highly important art.

I would warn the beginner to stand well back on the mat. This will lessen the risk of foot-faulting—an error to which he is especially susceptible.

"Don't Be Narrow"

Take ample "green"—the straight and narrow way is not the way to success in bowls. "Be up and 'don't be narrow' are first principles. Concentrate on the game the whole time.

When not occupied in learning and practising technique, observe the methods of your opponents and the position of the bowls.

After a year's practice, enter the club competitions and all the tournaments you can. This is the best way to acquire

THE G.S. BUTTON

Down in the city food was scarcer than ever; for the well-to-do there was none. Banks had closed; shops were shuttered; trade of any sort had vanished. Sometimes a shot echoed in an empty street. The Foreign Missions realised it was time to go. The officers of them began to pack. And all day women slipped furtively into their offices, beseeching them to take jewels or securities over the guarded and now impassable frontier, so that something might be saved from the wreck. To do so was, of course, impossible, and the women went away white and haggard. Later they returned to try the detachment. But the men were kept confined to quarters. There was no passing the sentry and nothing to be had but polite refusals from the sergeant. With sad steps they went away, taking jewels now as worthless to them as so many beads.

The hour of departure drew near: the detachment outside, with their equipment stacked against the wall, made their final preparations. Private Sandy was the last out into the deserted street. A cigarette hung from the corner of his mouth. Some of his buttons were still undone. He began winding a mis-started puttee, while the rest of the detachment watched and laughed.

"There's a time coming," he mumbled. "It's 'appealed' ere. It'll 'appen everywhere. You watch it, chaps. I'm going to be in the front rank for the share-out, I am."

The sergeant had gone in again to make certain that the rooms, which would be probably occupied by the Bolsheviks that evening, were being left challengingly clean. With his rifle held so aptly on his shoulder that it seemed to have the lightness of a sword, he went out on to the terrace and took a last look over the city. His pose was soldierly, stereotyped, non-committal. His thoughts were his own.

Meanwhile in the street a woman had appeared from round a corner and had drawn discreetly up to the detachment. The Corporal who was busy getting Private Sandy into shape did not see her. From her muff she fingered out a package. Everyone guessed what she wanted. She approached Private Brown, who was boyish and frank. He shook his head. She turned to Private Hodnet, but he looked away. Private Whale, "Old Man Whale," who had a sweet face and a big moustache, indicated with a jerk of the chin Sandy's equipment standing against the wall. She bent for a moment, pushed her parcel into the mouth of its ill-stowed pack and slipped away, as though she had never existed.

The sergeant returned sprucely. Private Sandy was shaken, complaining, into his kit. The detachment fell in, and presently the officer appeared. Words of command broke the silence of the old fortress-town. Blind windows of the plaster palaces stared down upon the empty street; but from somewhere spies watched the little detachment as it sloped arms, formed fours, turned to the left and marched off.

It was not till he reached Vienna that Private Sandy made the discovery. His helmet and equipment lay on the floor beside him, his curl hanging over his forehead, he was beginning to pull ornaments out of his pack. The door was hard, the light was bad. He had run out of cigarettes and had found no one to give him any.

"Things won't go on this way," he mumbled to himself. For at the moment he was alone in the room. "No, no. . . . There'll be a share out upon the parcel. 'Ulla. He had come upon the parcel. Something. . . . It rattled in a way at once dull but exciting. With a glance to make sure there was no one about he unwrapped the outer layers. Then with shaking fingers he undid the twists of tissue paper within. At last the contents lay before him: a rope of large, beautifully matched pearls; two small, round, flexible items of diamonds; a great egg-shaped emerald; rings; earrings; a brooch of enamel with an Imperial crown upon it; a coroneted envelope directed in a long slanting foreign hand and a folded sheet of paper.

By the light of the match he read the note. It was in faltering English. "When you come to Vienna you will be most kind to take these to the address. Anyone tells you of it. It is seventeen kilometres. It makes the saving of our family." Private Sandy did up the parcel carefully, slipped it back into his pack, sat down on the floor again and leant his head against the wall. "I had a shock his curl and looked around the cheerless room. Even one of those trinkets, even a 'take off' of the parcel, would set a man up for life. Most likely none in the detachment had an idea the thing was there; and in any case no one could know what the parcel contained. And she, whoever she had been, had chosen him out of them all. Me of 'em all, he thought and laughed. The blinking share-out! The share-out . . . and with a vengeance!

That night he slept little. Sparkling visions floated through his mind: of himself, owner of a motorcar; of himself standing treat up in the West hotels; of himself among the nuts at Ensom; of himself back again and with cash to spare in Budapest. Slowly the window bars grew distinct. Slowly the window bars grew distinct. Slowly that mournfulness which is not yet light crept across the ceiling. A languor came over him. He dreaded the approaching day, the hour of reveille and the end of dreams.

That afternoon, fider than was his wont, he went to the sergeant to put in for leave. "Going far?" the N.C.O. inquired with a steady eye. "Seventeen kilometres." "You'll be back by . . . ?" Sandy made calculations. "Ten, sergeant." "Not a minute after. That'll be all right." "Any objection to me taking my entrenching tool 'andle, sergeant?" "If you had it down the leg of your breeches, no one would know you'd got it. By ten, though, the sergeant did not mention the matter: the lieutenant was "for the duration"; and in any case it does not do to tell an officer everything.

Private Sandy set off upon his 22-mile walk. The afternoon was sunny and his gay shadow went before him. But behind him, though he did not know it, there followed other shadows. What happened on that walk there is no means of knowing. But when he reached the castle, he had lost all his unwonted smartness. There was a scratch across his cheek, an evil gash ran down the shoulder of his jacket; there was blood on the business end of his entrenching-tool; his lip was cut his haversack was gone. All that was left of it, two frayed ends of webbing strap, dangled forlornly from his belt.

Of how so many odd things had happened in the world that the old lady, whom we will call Countess Eulalie Czernay, was hardly surprised when her manservant, shuffling through the room in carpet slippers, remarked tartly that a foreign soldier, who had obviously been fighting, but her Excellency, was asking to see her. She recoiled her chair, craned her neck, and looked up at the man in his high collar, and disposed her hands.

Private Sandy, stepping in and glancing round the room, cluttered with nick-nacks and monumental furniture, caught sight of her. Private Sandy, stepping in and glancing round the room, cluttered with nick-nacks and monumental furniture, caught sight of her. Private Sandy, stepping in and glancing round the room, cluttered with nick-nacks and monumental furniture, caught sight of her. Private Sandy, stepping in and glancing round the room, cluttered with nick-nacks and monumental furniture, caught sight of her.

"This you, lady?" he asked extending his envelope. "So," said the Countess Eulalie, who had learnt English when the walls had been young but had not used it since. Private Sandy's cut lip widened to a smile as he began to unbutton his dishevelled jacket. The martial swell of his chest vanished, and from between it and his grey shirt he produced the package. Fumblingly he worked, and presently his whole exultation lay ranged upon the three-foot table.

"That's the lot of 'em," he announced. "It was three weeks since the old Countess Eulalie had had news of her granddaughter. That there was Bolshevikism in Budapest the papers had told her; she had read, too, ghastly rumours. The fortune which she had had largely vanished; in the fall of currency, the lands had been taken and she had considered the famous Czernay jewels as lost. And now that they lay, familiar, splendid and glittering, beside her, those thin hands which long ago archdukes had administered a little upon her shoulders. But this untidy boy in a foreign uniform was handing her a letter, so she accepted it and lifted it close to read. Presently she had finished. Her button boots shifted from the wooden footstool to the carpet and out of a great upheaval of shawl and fluff she stood abrupt, before her chair. She fumbled in her memory; at last she had the words. "I had this most noble" she read.

THE SPECTRE

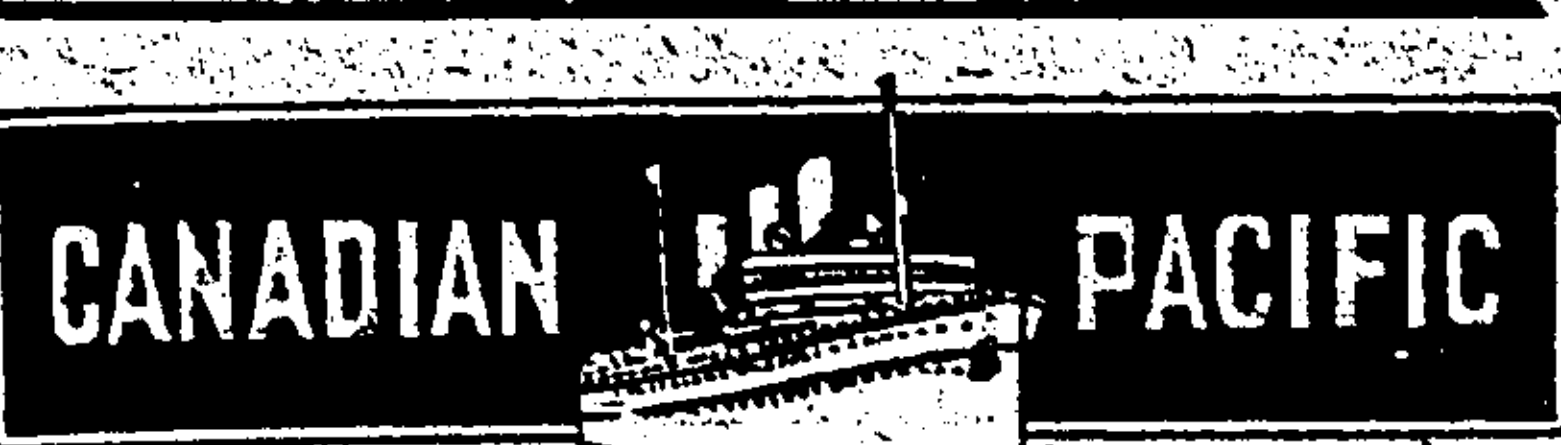

Vienna. Mysterious night lights whirling through the woods and a white-veiled apparition with outstretched arms caused such terror in the village of Boecklaruck, Upper Austria, that a police force set out to catch "it." The ghost-layers found a harmless collector of moths who clothed himself in white and carried a lamp in order to attract the insects.—Reuter.

ed in a thin quaver. "I find it most noble indeed. In the name of the family. . . . It is related in this," the letter trembled in her claw, "that one gives. . . . She fumbled on the table, her fingers found a bracelet of diamonds and she held it out. Private Sandy shook his curl. "Now, now, lady. Thank you all the same."

The aged fingers trailed the bracelet across the table again. The pale eyes considered this ungainly youth. But so many strange things had happened in the world of late that presently the old Countess understood. The eyes blinked and she smiled. "This . . . this, also, I find most noble." She stretched out that thin ivory claw, and Private Sandy, who had never heard of kissing hands, wrung it heartily.

For a moment there was silence. In her old brain tradition stirred like an echo of long ago, and her fingers fumbled to draw a bracelet of coral beads from her wrist. "For souvenir," she explained. But Private Sandy had not seen what she was doing. "Souvenir?" he muttered. That was a word he knew. He produced a dirty claspknife, cut a button from his jacket and laid it on the table.

There it lies amongst the jewels of that illustrious family, beside the great egg-shaped emerald which John Czernay took in battle from a Turkish Pasha centuries ago, beside those pearls some of which came from the disastrous necklaces of a French queen, beside the locket Maria Teresa gave to Julius Czernay in the cathedral of Presburg. If it tarnished, a piece of cheaply stamped brass which even in the military career had never been over well polished, a gaudy, a General Service button, as issued in their hundred millions to the rank and file of the British Army and handed on by them to the women of the world.

12,000 MURDERS A YEAR

Memphis Heads U.S.
Homicide List.

"AMERICA'S HELPLESS POLICE"

New York.

With about 12,000 murders and homicides last year, the United States still leads the civilized nations of the world in 1932 in the number of homicides, according to "The Spectator," an insurance periodical.

Basing his conclusions on reports from 180 cities in the United States, the writer found that the rate was 10.8 per 100,000 of population and did not vary from that of 1931. While the returns for the year are not yet complete, actual figures for the five years beginning in 1927 and ending with 1931 show that 51,206 persons in the country met death by homicide.

"Murder more than ever is becoming an ingenious art, if not a trade, in this country," said the article.

In contrast to the record in the United States he pointed out that the rate for 1931 in England and Wales per 100,000 population was 0.5.

The report concludes that American crime-detecting agencies are "inefficient, helpless or corrupt to a degree that should startle an apathetic public which has become habituated to look on even the most ghastly murder as a matter of course."

The City of Memphis continued to head the homicide list with a rate of 54.2 per 100,000 of population. Seven other Southern cities had rates exceeding 40 per 100,000
of population.

The rates for the five largest cities were Chicago, 12.8; Detroit,
9.6; Los Angeles, 8.4; New York,
8. and Philadelphia 7.8.—Reuter.

DEATH FROM A BROKEN HEART

Jury Challenges
Medical View.

SCIENTISTS PROVED WRONG

London.

For once the poets have scored over the Professors.

Writers of romance who have talked of men and maidens dying of broken hearts have often been pooh-poohed as sentimentalists by men of science.

It has been said by many scientists that no-one could die of a broken heart.

Now comes the death in Glasgow of the young widow of a Yorkshire doctor who was "broken-hearted"
by the loss of her husband.

Not long ago, too, the old medical view was challenged by a Coroner's Jury at Irlam in Lancashire, when they returned a verdict of "death from a broken heart."

Then, last November, the sudden death of the Medical Superintendent and Surgical Director of the North London Hospital was such a blow to his wife that she died within a few minutes.

"In some types of heart disease occurring in later life," it is stated at the City of London Heart and Lungs Hospital, "the muscular wall of the heart becomes thin and weakened."

"If in such patients, through exertion or emotion, an extra strain is thrown upon the heart, rupture may occur at the weak point. Such patients do actually die of a broken heart."—Reuter.

SAVING ENGLAND'S ENCHANTMENT

Herefordshire's Claim
To Beauty.

OLD BRIDGES SAVED

London.

To keep unbroken the enchanting spell of the countryside, to save it from the ugly incursions of industrialism, and to make the coloured countryside that roll away and away a paradise for bikers and for those who journey from the teeming towns in search of quietude and beauty.

That has been the life's object of Mr. G. H. Jack who is retiring after 26 years service as county surveyor and county architect of Herefordshire.

But he leaves a county only to take the whole country for his canvas, since he will immediately join in the capacity of consulting expert the headquarters staff of the Council for the Preservation of Rural England.

The first thing he believes is that the men who make the roads and bridges should have high ideals before them, and so, in his capacity as County Bridge Master, he trained a band of local craftsmen to take an interest in the aesthetics of bridge building.

Then he suggested that the men should band together in a craft guild—the Bridge Brothers of Herefordshire—and pledge themselves to a high standard of workmanship. This they have done.

So in Herefordshire to-day bridges dating from as far back as the 14th century have been widened and improved for modern traffic without destroying their picturesque appearance, and Mr. Jack can claim with justifiable pride that in modernising its roads Herefordshire has lost none of its old houses and only two of its old bridges.—Reuter.

STOLE BREAD FOR UNEMPLOYED

The arrested man had been brought to court, charged with stealing six stones of bread from a baker's shop. Evidence revealed that he had distributed the bread among the unemployed of the city. So the judge ordered his release.—Reuter.

MAJOR DOOLITTLE IN COLONY.

U.S. Airman To Visit Canton.

RETURNING TO AMERICA VIA EUROPE

Major James Doolittle, famous American aviator, accompanied by his wife, by the R.M.S. Empress of Japan.

Major Doolittle is on his way to Canton where he will watch the performances of the Curtiss Fighting plane he recently delivered to the Canton Government.

He is returning to the United States by Europe and will fly a part of the way by the K.N.I.L.M. (Dutch) Air line.

Mrs. Doolittle is leaving for Manila in a few days time and will be joined there by Major Doolittle. From Manila they will go to Bali and then to Batavia where they will meet their plane.

PRISONER FELS POLICEMAN

Cairo. Ahmed Rahman heard himself sentenced to six months' imprisonment.

Calmly, he lit a cigarette. A policeman rebuked him for his action.

Ahmed Rahman thereupon struck the policeman a blow on the head with his manacled hands.

His victim was removed to hospital in a critical condition.—Reuter.

of the preamble to the Agreement, which specifically states that the Four Power Conference are mindful of the right of every State, which cannot be affected without the consent of the interested party.

"There can, therefore, be no possible doubt that the object of the Agreement is to ensure that over many years to come, France, Germany, Italy and ourselves may agree in Europe upon the same policy of peace."

"That is the object which must be generally approved and it is entirely consistent with the aim and spirit of the League Convention and with much respect for the rights of other Powers."

Referring to Article Two of the Agreement, which makes special mention of Articles 10, 16 and 19 of the League Covenant, Sir John

Simon pointed out that the Agreement, while contemplating quadrilateral examination in respect of the methods of procedure, is expressly stated to be "Without prejudice to decisions which can only be taken by the regular organs of the League of Nations."
